What Makes a Good Day's Fishing? A Problem of Catch and Release.

The other day I watched a bank angler catch a fish every four or five casts ALL DAY!

I counted well over twenty fish. I was in a drifting boat and since there were long periods of the day when I could not watch him I can only guess at his total catch.

One angler I know is reputed to have caught over ninety fish in the day, on dries, from a drifting boat, on the same water.

When I fished Bewl regularly there were numerous claims of anglers catching over thirty fish in a day.

At the Spring Association Match on Grafham this year if we had not had a time bonus policy I am sure anglers would have been catching over forty fish on the day.

If I don't catch anything I know it is not a good day. Where does the line between a blank and a good day lie.

I think catch and release is a good thing. Many years ago when very few waters allowed C&R many dead fish went into the dustbin. That was unacceptable.

A ticket which allows the angler to kill the few fish he needs for the table and then continue fishing adds to the enjoyment of the day.

Of course there is so much more to a 'good day' than the number of fish you catch.

The aesthetics of the perfectly timed cast – The atavistic excitement of the chase and kill – The intellectual and knowledge based decision making, which leads to success – and the environment in which we fish.

But! What is the limit that turns a good day's catch into unacceptable slaughter?

A few years ago I decided that unless I was fishing in an unlimited catch competition (and they have virtually disappeared – thank goodness!) I would try to stop after a double limit. Bewl used to have a six fish ticket. Other still waters had a limit of eight fish so between twelve and sixteen fish is when I now stop.

The efficacy of the Dry Fly

At the Round Five – Group Three match on Grafham fished on Wednesday 8th September, Simon Newman of Iver F.C showed how, given decent conditions, the dry fly sorts out the better fish.

Fishing dries in Savages Creek his eight fish weighed, on average, half a pound more (apart from Joan Russell, who had the biggest fish and Si Gaines who also had a four pound fish) than anyone else's eight fish bag.

At least one angler who fished regularly in AMFC and other competitions has spoken to me about abandoning the time bonus and just weighing in the fish caught.

In the unlikely event of this happening it would, I am sure, lead to more anglers developing their skills and knowledge about fishing dries.

Not a bad thing I think!

Hanningfield F.A. Have Easy Win in Group One - Round 5 On Windy Day at Rutland

A frustrating and windy day on Rutland for the match on Saturday 11th. September.

Frustrating because the main bowl, especially around the aerators, was full of fish and this was right in the middle of the racing course set up by the sailors.

Their racing started about 10.30 am and continued all day.

Doubly frustrating was that in the cloudy morning the fish were high (in the top two feet) in the water. With 40/50 keels slicing through the water at that depth the fish soon disappeared.

this meant taking short drifts into the Dam. For some this meant too short drifts and the wardens had to come out and remind anglers that they were not to fish inside the buoys.

This result meant that nothing is certain in Group One

Group Two fished on the same day and details of the fishing will be in that report

Only One Point Each Between Top Four Teams Group Two Round Five

With both Group One and Two fishing on the same day there were a lot of AMFC boats out.

At the start almost every boat headed for the centre of the main bowl.

One or two anglers started in front of Normanton Church to catch a few fish. But these 'dried up' and they joined the majority.

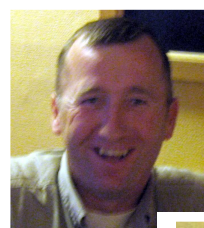

As explained in the Group One report there was not even time for one drift before the sailing yachts ruined the area. This was sad because early on the fish were high in the water and nymphs were catching.

Eventually most of the boats abandoned the centre of the bowl and were forced to fish along Nomanton Shore and close to the Dam.

Nymphs, particularly Dawl Bachs on floating lines worked, but the best bags came to attractors on slow/medium sink lines.

Danny Peet used a fast glass with a blob on the point, two nymphs on the middle droppers and a Tequila Sunrise on the top dropper. This was the most successful fly.

In the early afternoon the sun came out and the wind increased. This made the fishing difficult and unpleasant. A number of anglers left the area, but those who stayed on the Dam Wall managed a few fish late in the afternoon.

Group Three - Fish Hawks 'B' Almost Champions after Win In Round Five at Grafham

Provided Fish Hawks 'B' turn up to get just one point they will be the Group Three Champions.

They have had an impressive season, with four firsts and one third place. However their weight advantage over Iver F.C. is quite small being only 36lbs 1oz. They do need the extra point to guarantee their win.

Most people were catching on floating lines or midge tips with nymphs. John Mees used his local knowledge to good effect and at 2pm was the first to a limit pulling on a D13 in the bowl of the dam. However, the best bag was a superb performance by Simon Newman of Iver who took 8 fish for 20lb on dries in Savages.

John Caldwell reports

Round 5 for Group 3 took us to Grafham which was on good form with a rod average of 5.4. Conditions seemed perfect at the start with a gentle breeze from the north. However, the fish were down in the water and action was slow. As the conditions warmed up a bit, fish began to appear close to the southern bank from the sailing club to the seat and along the sludge

Joan Russell Wins Best Fish

It is not very often that we have a Lady Winner. Julie Emmerson had the best fish of the season in 1997. These are the only two I can remember.

Things could not be closer at the top of this Group. A win by two ounces gave England Police the same number of points as Tunbridge Wells F.F.A.

during the day, with small sedges on the water all day and damsels appearing when the sun shone through and the temperature rose during the early afternoon.

England Police F.F.A.

Outside the lodge booms and towards the sailing club fish were rising steadily to these throughout the day. Rods were seen to bend every so often to nymphs on floating and sink tip lines. A windless few hours and dead air during the early afternoon showed the green algae to be quite heavy although a little breeze later on helped fly presentation and boat drift.

The four teams fishing in Group 4 at Grafham began the match in almost windless, misty conditions, with low cloud and very little ripple, especially on the northern side of the reservoir. A few fish showed themselves along this side but few rods were seen to bend. Reports from boats which went to the eastern and southern parts of the water indicated that many fish were caught in the first few hours of the match before things became slower in the afternoon.
